LOSS OF TEETH.

M. J. EMANUEL, Surgeon-Dentist, Member of the College of Surgeuts of Leyden and Utrecht, continues to super,
THE LOSS OF TEETH, from one to a complete ast, upon his seautiful system of selfAdhesios, which has procured him such universal approbation in some hundreds of cases, and recommended by numerous physicians and surgeons of New South Wales, as being the most ingenious method of supplying artificial teeth hitherto invented. They are so contrived as to adapt themselves over the most tender gums or remaining stumps, without causing the least pain, rendering the operation of extraction quite unnecessary.
They are so fixed as to faster astarn any Loose Teeth, by forming a new gum where the TREIN, by forming a new gum where the gums have SHRUNK from the use of calomel or gums have shrunk from the use of caloinel or other causes, without the aid of any wikes or spanish; and above all, are firmer in the mouth, and fixed with that attention to nature as to astonish the most sceptical. Mr. E. also begs to invite those not liking to undergo any painful operation, as practised by most members of the profession, to inspect his painless but effective system. Specimens, from one to a complete set, may be seen at his residence daily. And in order that his system MAY BE WITHIN THE REACH OF THE MOST ECONOMICAL, the will continue the same moderate charges. Those interested in the surject will find this statement of their supper RIGHTY OVER ALL OTHERS TO BE ENTIRELY

WILL FIND THIS STATEMENT OF THEIR SUPERIORITY OVER ALL OTHERS TO BE ENTIRELY AND SCRUPLOUGH, CORRECT, Mr. E. wearing himself artificial teeth made on this principle.

Mr. Emanuel's Cement for stopping decayed teeth, however large the cavity: it is far superior to anything ever before used, as it is placed in the tooth in a soft state, without any pressure or pain, and in a short time becomes as hard as the enamel, and will remain firm in the tooth for years, rendering extraction unnecessary. It arrests all further decay, and renders them again useful in mastication. The tooth warranted never to change colour. Mr. E. can confidently assert that this is one of the most valuable inventions ever introduced, and he will readily undertake any case wherein others have dily undertake any case wherein others have failed.

Parents should be extremely cautious with their children in second dentition; Mr. E. having seen several cases wherein the permanent teeth have been extracted for the milk teeth, thereby causing malformation of children's mouths.

Rivola Bay — From the Gazette of Thursday we learn that Mr. Underwood (in pursuance of a suggestion of his Excellency the Governor) undertook in the course of his vayages to and from Portland Bay, to examine the coust from Rivoii Bay to Cape Northumberland, with a a view, if possible, to find an opening in Lake Bonney, or an available aperture in some part of the coast. Mr. Underwood seems to have executed his task with his usual energy, tact, and discernment; and the results, as described by him in his letters to his Excellency, fully confirm the Governor's impression as to the existence of a sate anchorage in Rivoii Bay. This anchorage, it appears, is only adapted "for vessels not drawing more than ten feet water;" but even this is important in an exwater; but even this is important in an extended line of coast, of which the chief characteristics are "unbroken lines of samity beach," £900,000; the amount of dividend at COASTERS INVARIDS.

BANKING TRANSACTIONS OF THE LAST FOUR YEARS.

A PAPER has been lately compiled under the direction of the Colonial Secretary and published with his signature in the Government Gazette, entitled, "General Abstract of the Average Assets and Liabilities, and of the Capital and Profits, of the screen! Banks of the Colony of New South Wales, for the Quarters ended 31st March, 30th June, 30th September, and 31st December, 1814; and of the General Averages for the years 1841, 1812, 1843, and 1844."

Of some of the returns included in this locument, we have already made use. In our leading article of the 7th ultimo, we gave a comparative view of the Bank Assets and Liabilities at 31st December of each of the last two years. The Abstract before us embraces the last four years—the most memorable years, in all that relate to commerce and finance, that New South Wales ever saw, or will probably see again during the present generation.

The chief particulars are as follows:-

1812 ..... 192,533 1843 . . . . . . 159,940 1814 . . . . . . . 151,540 The circulation is thus seen to have been decreasing throughout the last three n the preceding year by £22,400; in 1813 it fell to the further extent of £32,600; and in 1844 it again fell £8,400 below that of 1843. The deficiency in 1844, compared with 1841, was £63,400, or nearly 30 per cent.

DEPOSITS. Year 1841 ..... €1,060,306 1842 ..... 970,236 1843 ..... 814,888 1844 ..... The amount of deposits was less in 1814 than in 1841, by £125,500, or upwards of 113 per cent. COIN.

Year 1841 ......£379,714 1842 ...... 468,257 1843 ..... 104,671 1844 ..... 458,915 The amount of coin was more in 1844 than in 1841, by 74,200, or nearly 20 per cent.

DISCOUNTS. Year 1841 ..... £2,582,204 1842 ..... 2,511,551 1813 ..... 2,134,232 1814 ..... 1,679,806

The amount of discounts was less in 1814 than in 1811 by £902,400, or nearly

CAPITAL PAID UP Year 1841 ..... £1,888,778 1842 .... 2,130,706 1843 ..... 2,066,246

what it is-the actual amount of the year's

We hope, however, to want of precision involves another ano. maly. For example—the average capital of the Bank of New South Wales for the year 1844, is stated at £182,477; the amount of dividend at £6,256; and the average rate per annum of this dividend. take out his pencil, and test this state ment, he will find that six per cent, upon the capital would be £10,948; and that the sum specified as amount of dividend, is at the rate of only 3.4 per cent. This inaccuracy of course runs through the whole of the tables under these three

> We observe another error, for which we cannot account. The paid up capital £27,000; and the rate per annum at 8 per cent. This is clearly wrong; for taking the £27,000 as a half-year's dividend, it is at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum. We find, on reference, that this error exists not only in the Colosworn return, for the 30th September last, of the Bank itself. It may admit of explanation; but is at present quite past our comprehension.

PORT PRILLIP BERF .- Mr, G. D. Mercer publishes in the Geology Advertiser the following pleasing account of a shipment of Port Phillip beef:—"Leith, 6th September, 1844. Phillip beef:—"Leith, 6th September, 1844.
Sir, I am glad to say that our Port Phillip salted beef proves to be of excellent quality, and in prime condition, and we are selling it for ship's stores at 6ts, per tierce in bond; the duty is about 6s. per tierce. I regret to understand that the beef from Sydney is so very inferior; the fault must be in their mode of coring it. Our's was curred by Messrs. Austin and Bolden, at Port Phillip. Every cask was turned out and carefully examined on arrival here, and again repacked with clean salt and there, and again repasked with clean salt and fresh pickle, so that it will now keep for twelve months in any climate; not a piece was found to be tainted, and we are in great hopes of getting rid of the whole in small lots at about the trice named. I am respectfully, Sir, your most obedient servant, J. W. Broancoor."

- [We would take the liberty of reminding the writer of this letter that it was port Phillio iter of this letter that it was Port Phillip writer of this letter that it was Port Phillip and not Sydney cured meat that gave such a bad name to Australian beef last year.]

there is no dust; and how sweet is the breeze that salutes your city-burnt face, if you do not go too near a boiling-down establishment.

Such were my thoughts a few days since, when rambling along that part of the southern approach to the city where the road being cut some twenty feet deep, there is on either side a beautiful view of a bank of dry clay. Two vehicles were approaching me, one each way: they passed when exactly opposite where I was standing, when I heard a loud hearty cheerful voice exclaim—

"Tom, my boy, do you remember the green alippers."

"I shall never forget them," was the brief re-

The other speaker was a tail thin young man, with an intelligent counterance—but there is no occasion to describe Tom Currency, everybody knows him. Are not his abilities and his neglect of all that he ought to take care of, his virtues and vices, matters of every day conversation? Is he not a clever attorney, does he not lord it over country magistrates, who would as soon see the old gentleman himself enter their courts. Is he not to be seen every day in the Police Office Yard with a crowd of admiring hangers-on, to whom he is explaining a point of criminal practice in such clear terms that they are convinced that it is only a dispensation of providence in favour of the thieves and vagabonds of Sydney that prevents him from being Attorney-General, in which case the same power that now enables him to get people out of all sorts of scrapes would infallibly hang them all?

But the green slippers.

But the green slippers.

The fair and fat lady to whom I alluded at first, sithough well to do in the world, could not help occasionally remembering the time when she lived by her wits, or rather by the activity of her fingers, and when out a-shopping one day she took a fancy to a pair of green slippers: now these alippers were probably worth some four or five shillings, and our fair friend had as may pounds in her pocket, and was besides a liberal woman, but still There's a pleasure in prigging which prigs only know.

The slippers were missed, circumstances pointed out the probability of her being the thief, a search warrant was obtained and the slippers found.

The next morning, the husband of our friend was at The Currency's deep standard beauty.

was at Tom Currency's door at an early hour, looking exceedingly doleful. "Well this here's a pretty go about Sal," was the onening of the conversation.

"Well this here's a pretty go about Sai, was the opening of the conversation.

"What is it," was Tom's reply.

after hearing the case from the policeman who executed the search warrant, confidently ex-pressed an opinion that Sal was "into it up to her neck." The husband offered immediately to prove neck." The husband offered immediately to prove an alibi, or to bring two men who had brought the slippers out from England, and it was with some difficulty that Tom Currency could per-suade his clients that Sal must be committed, and he only did it at last, by saying, "very well, if you say a word she'll be lagged." Committed she was, and in due time indicted at the Court of Quarter Sessions, for stealing a pair of slippers. Now in the Charter Ses-committed she was, and in due time indicted at the Court of Quarter Sessions, for stealing a pair of slippers. Now in the Quarter Sessions Tom Currency was in his glory; nine out of ten of the jury had known him "since he was a boy," and they were confident that he knew more law "than the Chairman," nay, had nt he himself been heard to say, that the Chairman was a muif, and that the Crown Prosecutor knew nothing about law? had he not won a case the week before, because it was not proved that the Sydney in which a certain crime was committed, was Sydney in New South Wales? which, of itself, would have been sufficient for his glorification, but he was always doing something of the kind.

Well, Tom was a careful man; he had no communication with witnesses; he merely told his client what would acquit her, and she undetrook to find men who would, to use her own expressive language, "do the thing that was Sal was busy shaking hands with her friends when the Crown Prosecutor moved that she might be remanded until to-morrow, to be in-dicted for receiving stolen property. There's cheek for you said a by-stander.

Tom Currency protested against it; he al-luded to the liberty of the subject, asked the Court to wait while he sent for Magna Charta,

RECOVERY OF MISS MARTINEAU
THROUGH THE AID OF MESMERISM.

THROUGH THE AID OF MES-MERISM.

To the Editor of the Atlas.

Dean Sin,—Allow me to make known to the public through you a very interesting and important fact. It has been generally known that that able writer and excellent woman, Miss Harriet Martineau, was suffering under the influence of a complaint so serious that she had been compelled to retire from active life to a trength was reduced to the lowest degree, and that little hope was entertained of her ultimate recovery. Expectation of this, I believe she herself had none. Last June, however, Mr. Spencer Hall was lecturing on phrenologic mesmerism in Newcastle, and was introduced to Miss Martineau by her relative, Mr. Grunow, an eniment surgeon there. Miss Martineau felt as atrong desire to try whether the mesmeric insured to the Lord Mayor, Mr. Sheriff Sidney took the chair.

The report was then read, showing that the society was established in 1842; that its object was to endeavour to persuade the public to abstain from making purchases in the eventing, and thus to remove all inducement from employers to keep their aboys open beyond a reasonable time, by taking from them the risk of loss. Their efforts had met the advocacy of the press; other to was had joined them in endeavouring to secure this object, which the committee hoped would be eventually obtained. (Loud cheers.)

resisted all the power of opium, but has restricted so much vigour that she can take her daily walk of two or three miles full of a new impulse of life, and with no inconvenience except that of a sharp appetite.

These facts Miss Martineau has been in no haste to make public, desiring, with her accustomed firmness of purpose, to test the efficacy of the remedy to an actual state of convalence, before even communicating the cause of it to her friends. Some weeks ago, a letter of the stated that before the application of mesmerism, she had completely given up all hope of recovery. Having no authority, however, to mention these particulars, I kept silence, but, as will be seen, all prohibition being taken away by Miss Martineau herself, I hasten to communicate it, knowing that a large public will sincerely rejoice in the prospect of the return to health of this useful woman. My sanction for the amnouncement of this singular fact is contained in a letter just received from Mr. Spencer Hall himself, dated Glasgow, October 18, and in these words:—"There can be no hesitation in speaking of the triumph of mesmerism in the case of Miss Harriet Martineau. She has written to me on the subject with the fullest liberty to use her name. I send you a Glasgore Argus, in which you will find some mention of the case. She sjeaks, or rather writes, in the most grateful strain, and says "she can never be thankful enough for auch a resuscitation."

Hall held another conversations on mesmerism in the Assembly-rooms, when there was again vious trial, but it was explained that particular business had called one of them to Port Phillip, and the other tq New Zealand.

To use the words of the report of the case in the Herald, "the Jury, without retiring from the box, returned a verdit to fin to guitty; and the Chairman, in discharging the prisoner, remarked that he hoped the escape would be a warning to her."

There was a spree that night:—Sal gave a supper to about thirty intimate friends; and about eleven o'clock, when ahe was beginning to get comfortable, she expressed her decided opinion that Tom knew how to conduct a case better than the three Judges and the Attorney-unexpected restoration from an illness which must have been of more than five years' standing, as I recollect visiting her at Tynemouth nearly so long ago, and she was then labouring under it. The fact itself is one which I regard as singularly important. Independent of the pleasure which will be widely felt at the prospect of again regaining the services of so estimable a public writer, it must be deemed a circumstance peculiarly favourable to the cause of truth and science, that this much-contested agency should have fallen thus personally under pect of sgain regaining the services of so estimable a public writer, it must be deemed a circumstance peculiarly favourable to the cause of truth and science, that this much-contested agency should have fallen thus personally under the notice and careful observation of a mind like that of Miss Martineau—a mind distinguished rather by its strong powers of reason and masculine self-command, than for its sensitive imaginativeness. Much ridicule has been thrown on mesmerism, and many charlatans and sordid impostors have, as was to be expected, seized on it as a means of raising cash, and thereby tended to surround it with doubt and disbelief. But, on the other hand, so many well attested and most striking phenomena connected with it have been exhibited by men of the most unquestionable integrity, and before men of the most scientific and careful minds, that it is vitally important that we should be watchful not to retard the development of a great truth, which, if once established, must draw after it great benefits to mankind, out of a puerile fear of being imposed upon.

And here let me say, that having known Mr. Spencer Hall from a boy, and knowing that he is a man totally incapable of deceiving others, however, like all mortals, he might be liable to be deceived himself, I was the more disposed to examine into the phenomena he professed to exhibit, and that this examination has convinced me that there is a great agent existent in our nature which lies at the bottom of these matters, and which deserves to be yet fully traced out and made clear. Mr. Hall has now, for a year or more, exhibited mesmeric demonstrations in various large cities and parts of our country. In all these his openness and candour have won him the confidence of the leading men of science in those places. Everywhere he has offered every facility for medical and philosophical men tosatisfy themsless of the reality of the operations performed, and has received the most decisive testimonies of the satisfaction of such men with his conduct. He ha able a character as that in Miss Martineau case can be effectually repelled—it were worse than childish to turn wilfully our backs on such evidence, and still to cry—delusion; it would be a sin against the progress and happiness of our race. Leaving, however, these facts to their present operation on the public mind, remain, dear sir, yours truly.

MEETING OF THE METROPOLITAN DRAPERS' ASSOCIATION AT EXE-TER-HALL. ON Wednesday evening, October 9, a very TER-HALL.

On Wednesday evening, October 9, a very numerous meeting of this association was held at Exeter-hall. The objects of the meeting were to endeavour to prevail on the drapers generally to agree to close their shops in the ensuing winter evenings at an early hour, and on the public to avoid late shopping, in order that the evils which the late-hour system of business entails on a very numerous class—the draper's assistants—may be avoided.

The hall was densly crowded; there were at least 4,000 persons present. On the platform were a number of influential employers and several clergymen. In the unavoidable absence of the Lord Mayor, Mr. Sheriff Sidney took the chair.

ormmencement of the official character of the sheriff. (Cheers.) The wisdom and humanity of this country had abolished West Indian slavery, and now, in these islands, where compulsory labour for eighteen out of the twenty-four hours had formerly existed, six hours voluntary labour was found sufficient to obtain ample subsistence. In a part of the day for ubsistence, leaving the rest of the day substatence, leaving the rest of the day for recreation, mental improvement, and repose. If the humanity of this country could thus travel across the Atlantic, ought it not, upon every principle of patriotism, to be found at home? (Cheers.) Charity, religion, and patriotism, taught them that if the heart were rotten the extremities must suffer. (Cheers.) There was not a physician or a surgeon in the meta-cali-

cluded, after an eloquent address, during which he was loudly appleuded, with moving the following resolution:— "That this meeting being of opinion that the present protracted hours of business in shop and other public establishments are devoid o advantage to employers, and unneces the convenience of the public, and, advantage to employers, and unnecessary for the convenience of the public, and, further, being deeply impressed with the conviction that the health, morals, and spiritual interests of the assistants are thereby sacrificed, does there-fore now express its decided opinion that an immediate change in such a pernicious custom is loudly and imperatively called for." Dr. J. Coupland, Fellow of the Royal So-ciety, rose to assent the resolution. ciety, rose to second the resolution.

speaker had very forcibly and traly said, that there was not a physician or a surgeon who would not agree that afteen hours labour out of twenty-four must be most destructive to lealth, and in every way injurious. As a phy-sician, he concurred in that opinion. It might be recollected that the immortal Beson had ad-vised the division of the twenty-four hours into vised the division of the twenty-four hours into three equal parts, eight to be devoted to sleep and repose, eight to devotion, and food, and amusement, and eight to mental or physical exertion. But this was in the merry days of old England. They liked now in somewher altered times. It was a fact that the hours of exertion of many in the middle classes of society extended to 15 or 16; and it was well known. altered times. It was a fact that the hours of exertion of many in the middle classes of society extended to 15 or 16; and it was well known to medical men that this was a most fruitful source of disease; for, however wholesome the food might be during that long period of exertion, it could not be properly digested, and hence those slow but fatal diseases which undermined the constitution, and were perpetuated to the third and fourth generation, it desire the offspring extended so far, which was rarely the case under such circumstances. He might be asked what were the evils of this state of society? He believed that three fourths of the discases to which human life was liable astually areas from the operation of this cause in the metapolis. He would state what they were—that most fatal and irremediable disease, consumption; discases of the brain and nervous system, and digestive organs. They had, as a consequence of these diseases, lives complains, disorders of the stomach, diseases of the heart and of the kidneys, terminating in droppy and other diseases of a more fearful nature—acrofula and all the different forms of strums, general debility, a sinking of the powers of life, low nervous fevers, and numerous other diseases. In manufacturing towns, where individuals were employed in walking the befores and in needle-work for, these long periods of labour, numerous disorders, usually termed nervous disorders, were generated. These not only injured the health of the individual, but the offspring almost always become diseased. To women especially these long hours at the state of the community who employed these women could only be brought to reflect that, by a more prudeatial arrangement of their day's occupation, many of these evils might be prevented, one great object of that meeting would be attained. (Cheers.)

great object of that meeting would be attained. (Cheers.)

The Rev. H. Hughes, M.A., rose to sustain the resolution. He alluded, in the course of an eloquent address, to the late munificant denation of Sir R. Peel to the town of Manchester.—the gift of £1000 towards the formation of a park for the recreation of the people. (Cheers.) They all agreed that parks were beneficial—that the parks in London were necessary to health; but what a mockery was it to provide parks for those engaged in unmitigated toll for for fourteen or fifteen hours a day! (Cheers.) In vain they planted their verdant trees—in wain the boundaries of their walks and flower-beds were marked out to those who, immured in the continued atmosphere of shops, were compelled to hear of privileges and joys of which it was their fate never to partake. (Cheers.) It was not for them the grass was green, or that the trees put on their verdure in the spring, or that the flowers bloomed, or that the breezes with all their invogorating influences blew. Here was the inconsistency of English benevolence, that whilst one and all were ready to acknowledge that fresh air and sun were necessary to the improvement of the physical condition of the human being, yet the false wants of society which were left unchecked, compelled him to debar himself of what was his inalienable right. (Cheers.) The victims of this system were left without strength or energy to make their troubles known: they became hopeless of improving their state. The same dark clouds hung over their future which now darkened their daily unmitigated toil. The consequence was, that now, instead of finding young men set out in life with earnest hopes and vigorous determination to work hard and honestly for a few years to insure prosperity, the young men from their own experience and they what they saw in others, sank into Selingae hopelessness and despair. (Cheers.)

BASE CONSPIRACY!!

IN consequence of the unprecedented auccess which has attended the exertions of the proprietors of the Bre Hive Drapery Establishment, to accommodate their customers and friends, a conspiracy has been raised against them, to prevent Christopher Newton and Brother from exposing their Goods at the shop front, by certain parties in the trade, who, no doubt, piqued at the immense run of business which is, day after day, transacted at the Bre Hive, have resorted to the police as the most effectual and underhanded way of interfering with, and endeavouring to exterminate, the only shop in the Colony where parties are fairly dealt with, or any thing like reasonable bargains are to be had. The result of their proceedings has been, that C. N. and Brother have been compelled to limit the exposure of their immense Stock of Goods to the windows of the premises, which may be always known by the BRITISH ENSIGN Continually hoisted over the Shop. Mark this, friends and patrons of the Bre Hive!! If you will only observe the emblems of the establishment, the Bre Hive and Baitish Ession. Nothing daunted by these futile attempts to put a stop to the success of their establishment, Christopher Newton and Brother have resolved to give a bolus for a pill; that is, they intend to sell every article in the trade cheaper than can be had in any other house in Sydney. In consequence of which, one part of the Shopwas closed rather earlier than usual last evening, in order to make a further REDUCTION OF FIVE PER CENT.

Below their usual charges, so that any person can be supplied

TEN PER CENT. CHEAPER

At the Bee Hive than elsewhere. This immense reduction under the prices of other have always supplied their customers five per cent. cheaper than any other house in Ad now they are resolved to make this sacrifice rather than allow conspirators to enjoy any portion of that extensive patronage which has been the lot of C. N. and Brother to enjoy, and for which they are every grateful, and further solicit a continuance of the BASE CONSPIRACY !!!

Notes and Sketches of New South Wales, during a Residence in that Colony from 1839 to 1844. By Mrs. Charles Merente. London: John Murray, Albemarle-street, 1844, pp. 164.

This work forms one of the series which Mr. Murray is publishing under the title of the "Home and Colonial Library," and we are sorry to say that it is not at all calculated to add to the reputation of a series of works which is calculated to be extremely useful. Mrs. Meredith (or to give her the name by which she is more generally known, Louiss Anne Twamley) is not altogether unknown to fame as an authoress, having published several works both in prose and poetry, the subject being generally botany. Thus we have being generally botany. Thus we have seen "The Romance of Nature; or, the Flower Seasons Illustrated, by Louisa Anne Twamley, the plates engraved after original drawings from nature by the authoress, price $2 2s.;" "Flora's Gems, or the Treasures of the Parterre, imperial familiarly described, and illustrated with coloured plates from original drawings by Louisa Anne Twamley." As these works have met with considerable success we looked with some anxiety for Mrs. Mere-

It appears that in 1839, Miss Twamley became the wife of Mr. Charles Meredith the son of a settler of considerable standng in Van Diemen's Land; that she shortly afterwards embarked with her husband for this colony, where she remained a few months, and then went to Van Diemen's Land, where she now resides, or at least did so very recently. will be seen from this, therefore, that the title of Mrs. Meredith's book is calculated to deceive; instead of sketches " during residence in the colony from 1839 to 1844." it ought to have been " during the summer of 1839-40," that being the actual period of her residence here. The size of he book shows that the sketches must be very brief, for it consists of only one hundred and sixty-four pages, of which thirty-four are occupied with a description of the voyage out, and thirty by remarks on natural history, leaving about one hun-dred pages for the sketches of New South Wales.

Our authoress left England in the ship Letitia, in June, 1839, and appears to have had a very uncomfortable passage in the choice of a vessel to come out Mr Meredith was very unfortunate. We have often heard complaints of ships being "ill-found," but if Mrs. Meredith is corect, the Letitia must have been very badly off for stores. A vessel carrying number of cabin passengers, to be in such a condition that " two or three old powder cannisters and preserve jars formed the entire drinking equipage of the cabin table wine-glass-long the innocent cause of direst jealousy—was lamentably broken," is, we should imagine, the only case of the kind. The account of the voyage is rather amusing, and as dolphin, for my ideas of the creature were such a kingular medley of classical-picture dolphins as big as calves, with fat tritons astride upon them; and spouting fountain dolphins, much the nose of a watering-pot, aher publication agent dolphins. nose of a watering-por; and photics noise n-board dolphins, something between St. orge's dragon, and a legless, curly-tailed s-that I wished to have my wavering no-nes somewhat settled: and one bright day in a tropics, as we lay becalmed, or nearly so, I se leaning over the vessel's side. looking sp, deep into the bluest of all blue water, ar and bright as crystal, when three fish, of ind quite new to me, same close to the shin. quite new to me, came close to the ship, ing to and fro, as if examining the state swimming to and fro, as if examining the state of our coppering; some one said very quietly, "Hush! those are dolphins," and so I guessed but not from any resemblance they bore to my ancient friends of that name. These were really very beautiful; their size I cannot accurately tell, for I found myself so often deceived in the relative proportion of things seen in a similar manner. The bonsto, as it swam past, only seemed to me the size of a large mackerel, and when brought on deck I found it exceeded that of a salmon. The dolphins might be four feet long, or more, of a slender shape, with a head of a salmon. The dolphins might be four feet long, or more, of a slender shape, with a head salmon, their long bodies, as they swam, making a perfect "line of beauty" of soveral curves, and their large fins and talls waring like fans in the water. Their colour appeared a delicate silvery blue, deepening by sate in the new two points of the production of the pro

We have on previous occasions giver Mrs. Meredith's first impression on seeing cal Garden, and have therefore no occasion to repeat them now; but we cannot help observing that the Gardens and Domain are visited by thousands of people, instead of as Mrs. Meredith represents, being left without any one to admire or enjoy their beauties.

After a short stay in Sydney, Mrs. Meredith accompanied her husband to Bathurst, and it is during this journey that she appears to have acquired the greatest part of the information now given to the orld, under the rather promising title of Notes and Sketches in New South Wales. It was just at the end of the drought that Mrs. Meredith made her journey, and to a person fresh from England, the road must have looked dreary enough: the accommodation too, at the inns, was not such as would be found in the county of Warwick, but still they are not all the filthy places, they are not all so deficient in creature comforts as those described in Bathurst is by no means favourable.

Journeying on, we arrived in process of time at the spot whence the first view of those lovely and verdant plains of Bathurst, of which I had heard so much, was to greet my delighted eyes. "There look! Do you not see them through the trees?" I did look, anxiously and eagerly, directing my eye-glass towards every point of the compass in succession; still nothing green could I discern, but on a nearer approach beheld a wide extent of brown earth, with occasional flurries of dust passing across if nothing green could I discern, but on a nearer approach beheld a wide extent of brown earth, with occasional flurries of dust passing across it; and this was all that remained of the sovaunted Bathurst Plains! Every blade of grass and every green herb had disappeared during the drought, and a dry desert usurped their place, whilst a few thin, weak, widely-separated little roots of dry, withering everlastings (Gnaphalium) were the only things bearing the semblance of vegetation. It was very dreary! We drove along the tedious road across the plains, which just undulate enough in places to prevent a person from seeing entirely over them, and that is all; no hill, grove, or tree, scarcely a bush, breaks the heavy, weary monotony, till the tired eye rests on the dim outline of the distant hills. At length a few straggling houses and a church showed us that time of the distant hills. At length a few straggling houses and a church showed us that we approached the settlement; but as this is divided into two portions about a mile asunder, with the deep channel which is sometimes (water permitting) the river Macquarie between them, we had yet farther to go. The second division of the township contains the gad, police office female factory, harracks, Soutch olice-office, female factory, barracks, Scotch hapel, and bank, with several stores and small police-office, female factory, barracks, Scotch chapel, and bank, with several stores and small shops of a most heterogeneous character, where you may find iron pots, writing-paper, blonde lace, fire-arms, Dutch cheese, "P. coats," crockery, and various other commodities, though very rarely the one article you require. The private dwellings are of all grades, but chiefly of the smaller class; and the public-houses, as compared with the others, very numerous. The bank, then the residence of near relatives, was our destination, and most welcome to me were the happy quiet and rest of the next few days, after our not very long, but tedious and fatiguing journey. Bathurst, being the last township on the "up-country road," is comparatively a place of some importance, and frequently visited by settlers from the less civilized districts beyond, to whom it is a kind of half-way metropolis, as well as being in their direct road to Sydney, whence there is a mail-cart twice a week (the distance being 120 miles); a strange-looking two-whence develved carrying the post, the driver, and two passengers when required. Travelling both night and day, and over the chief nart of the delect. carrying the post, the driver, and two pas-sengers when required. Travelling both night and day, and over the chief part of the delectand day, and over the chief part of the delect-gallop, it is not exactly the "thirdy shee tonds selected by nervous or comfortable persons. How the whole concern escapes destruction, at least once a week, seems miraculous; but with the favourite bush assurance of "No fear, Sir!" away they go, driving at the pace of a hunt overground that would make a steeple-chaser look twice; and if there be no fear, there is certainly far less danger than might be supposed, for I do not remember hearing of above half a dozen accidents during our residence in the colony. We found Bathurst still suffering severely from the devastating and ruinous consequences of the terrible drought. Every article of food was extremely dear, and nothing good could be procured at not carry his oriers and special passings into the drawing room; the physician dreams not of occupying the attention of a dinner-party with his last wonderful cure; even the author refrains from volunteering a recitation of his new book; and surely, according to our oldengrossed by ms bales and fleeces. However fascinating may be the company of his "fine-wool sheep" and peerless breed of Merinos, he should not insist on taking them out to dinner.

How far this may apply to Mrs. Meredith's personal acquaintances in the colony we are of course unable to say; as applied to colonial society generally, it is a most unfair, nay untrue, representation. Many of our most wealthy colonists, having risen by their own energy and industry from the more humble rank of life, are not, of course, whether men or are persons of strong common sense, and powers. But, besides these, are there not thousands of persons of education, many of them connected with the first families in Britain, distributed throughout the colony: the men, gentlemen and scholars the women possessing those accomplish-ments which enable them to adorn society season, it was most natural that the con versation of settlers should turn very much deavour to make it appear that no other subject formed the subject of conversation only shows that Mrs. Meredith was anxious to spin out her memoranda, and make her book as large as she could. Besides, it to think "what a very superior person this must be compared with the set she had to nix with in Australia! " After reading this little book carefully hrough, we cannot see what there is in it hat could have induced Mr. Murray publish it, especially as Mr. Hood's really nstructive work was published so short ime before it. Mrs. Meredith's forme pursuits would have led us to expect hat our public institutions would have attracted her attention, that the means of education, the state of religion, would have been noticed; but nothing of the kind appears. The Australian Subscription Library is spoken of in terms of approbation; but the Museum was no visited, the School of Arts is not named There is not one word respecting educa-tion, and with the exception of a brief otice of five lines respecting the Sydney afford the least clue to the religion of the people: for aught that appears in this ook, one-half of the inhabitants may be Mahometans, and the other half Hindoos In fact, they are not notes and sketche of New South Wales, but sketches of Mrs Meredith's sayings and doings-and, as letters to private friends in England, would have been interesting to parties taking a personal interest in the fortunes of Mrs. Meredith and her husband; but there is not sufficient matter in them to interest the public, although, from the manner in which it is published, it is probable that a rather extensive circulation will be ob-

many instances untouched—at least such was the case when I crossed the mountains. It could not avoid noticing likewise, that Major Mitchell's road, wherever originally marked by him, was almost invariably carried over the summits of hills, whilst level valleys lay within a few hundred feet; and as we proceeded, I looked out for the highest peaks ahead of us, knowing by experience that the surveyor's road would lead us over them. I was informed that a determination to adopt no other person's line of road was the reason of this most inconvenient and fatiguing route being resolved on, and I have since heard that a new survey is to be made, and a more level and rational track marked out. The only portion of the present road for which I can give Major Mitchell great credit is the Pass of Mount Victoria, by far the most grand and striking scene in this mountain region. credit is the Pass of Mount Victoria, by far the most grand and striking scene in this mountain region. As we approached it, a huge barrier of rocks seemed to close up the onward path, till a sudden turn showed us a gorge cut in them, through which we drove, with a high wall of crags on the right hand, and the losty summit of the mountain towering up on the left. Another turn brought us out of the chasm, and in full view of a most grand and beautiful landscape. The road was carried (from the opening of the chasm) by an arch and embankment across a deep valley that lay below, called the Vale of Clwyd, and along the side of the opposite mountain, till it gradually reached the level of the valley beyond. We stayed some minutes on the embankment the side of the opposite mountain, till it gradually reached the level of the valley beyond. We stayed some minutes on the embankment to enjoy the prospect, so refreshing to eyes weary of the dark desolate sterility of the scenes we had just emerged from. On the left hand, the high rocky ranges of which Mount Victoria forms a part nearly enclosed the narrowing valley, the lower portions being overgrown with gum and wattle (Acacia) trees, amidst which grotesque rocks rose up here and there like fantastic ruins. From the deep water-courses that were plainly visible on the mountain-aides, the stream running through the vale must sometimes be considerable; but at the time we passed it was dry, and its tolerably green banks, shadowed by groups of graceful young gum-trees, had quite a smooth and lawnlike aspect as compared with the rough country around. On the right hand, the same long range of precipitous rugged heights continued, stretching away to the north-east; and safely girdled by their fortress-like and frowning walls lay the pretty Vale of Clwyd.

girdled by their fortress-like and frowning walls lay the pretty Vale of Clwyd.

AUSTRALIAN FROOS.—In the Macquarie, near Bathurst, I first saw the superb green frogs of Australia. The river, at the period of our visit, was for the most part a dry bed, with small pools in the deeper holes, and in these, among the few slimy water-plants and Confervæ, dwelt those gorgeous reptiles. In form and size they resemble a very large common English frog; but their colour is more beautiful than words can describe. I never saw plant or gem of so bright tints. A vivid yellow-green seems the groundwork of the creatures array, and this is daintily penciled over with other shades, emerald, olive, and blue greens, with a few delicate markings of bright yellow, like an embroidery in threads of gold on shaded velvet. And the creatures sit looking at you from their moist, floating bowers, with their large eyes expressing the most perfect enjoyment, which, if you doubt while they sit still, you cannot refuse to believe in when you see them flop into the delicious cool water, and go slowly stretching their long green legs, as they pass along the waving grove of sedgy, feathery plants in the river's bed, and you lose them under a dense mass of gently waving leaves. 2nd, 10, seg. this. whilst a burning. walls lay the pretty Vale of Clwyd. them under a dense mass of gently waving layers and to see this, whilst a burning froiling sun is scoredning up your very life, and the glare of the herbless earth dazzles your agonized eyes into blindness, is almost enough to make one willing to forego all the glories of humanity, and be changed into a frog!

Syddey Market.—The market in Sydney is well supplied, and is held in a large commodious building, superior to most provincial market-houses at home. The display of fruit in the grape season is very beautiful. Peaches also are most abundant, and very cheap; apples very dear, being chiefly imported from Van Diemen's Land, and frequently selling at sixpence each. The smaller English fruits, such as strawberries, &c., only succeed in a few situations in the colony, and are far from plentiful. Cucumbers and all descriptions of melon abound. The large green water-melon, rose-coloured within, is a very favourite fruit, but I thought it insipid. One approved method of eating it is, after cutting a sufficiently large hole, to pour in a bottle of Madeira or sherry, and mix it with the cold watery pulp. These melons grow to an enormous size (an ordinary one is from twelve to cirches inches in and mix it with the cold watery pulp. These meions grow to an enormous size (an ordinary one is from twelve to eighteen inches in diameter), and may be seen piled up like huge cannon-balls at all the fruit-shop doors, being universally admired in this hot, thirsty climate.

MAIZE remains as reported last week, viz.
